Conference announcement and call for abstracts for AIDS Impact 2019

“Promises to keep and miles to go”

We are pleased to announce the 14th AIDS Impact Conference to be held on 29th – 31st July 2019 in London United Kingdom.

AIDS Impact is an international behavioural and psychosocial science conference which focuses on an international dialogue on the human face of the epidemic. The conference includes multidisciplinary understanding, state of the art research, international good practice, pathways to bring globally generated insights to bear on problems faced in the communities and countries hardest hit by the HIV/AIDS epidemic – and a deep understanding of the importance of the human experience in all aspects of HIV prevention, treatment and care. The conference is held biannually and has evolved as one of the leading platforms for understanding, updating and debating the behavioural, psychosocial and community facets of HIV in light of changing social conditions and medical advances.

Each AIDS Impact meeting attracts delegates new to the field as well as seasoned researchers, prevention workers, community members, policy makers, and other key stakeholders from universities, institutes, and organisations around the globe. The 2010 London conference will promote pioneering work on understanding the dynamics of a changing epidemic, with a key focus on the latest avenues for prevention, treatment and care.

Registration is now open. To register for the conference, please log on to www.aidsimpact.com.

The call for abstracts for the conference is now open. We invite candidates interested in sharing their research at the event to submit abstracts. Abstract submission can be made online at <http://www.aidsimpact.com>.
